"Everyone has someone. Except me."

If that thought finds you every December, you are not broken, and you are far from alone. The holidays turn the volume up on everything: loneliness, family questions, old memories, the photos on your phone.

This book won't ask you to pretend. It will help you understand what you feel, because named feelings lose their power; plan the hardest days hour by hour, because empty days fill with worry; answer 'So, are you seeing anyone?' with calm, ready words; and build small rituals that make the season feel like yours again.

Start with one page tonight. The light is still on.

Still Lit

For every woman who feels alone at Christmas

CLARA WHITFIELD